

Ticket Design

Creating a design for your ticket requires you to spend time to think of good design ideas that can market your event effectively. Ticket design ideas must complement to the theme and purpose of your event. The layout, color, typography and other design elements should be in harmony achieve an appealing ticket look.

A visually appealing ticket for your event can influence your target market to purchase a seat to your activity. Admit many to your event using effective and appealing prints. Do not forget to print them on high quality paper to leave a good impression and produce sturdy prints ideal for ticket printing.

Instructions

- 1
Write down all the necessary event information for yourself so it is in a clear and concise form. Make sure you include the name and address of the venue, the price of the ticket, the event name, event's start time and assigned seat, if necessary.
- 2
Design a ticket on a piece of paper. Most tickets will be rectangular with the information printed clearly on it. You can also use websites, like the one in Resources 1, for a template to write in or type in your information.
- 3
Plug in the event information. Experiment with different placing of the information, either by hand or on the computer. Play with it until it looks good to you and you feel the information can be read.
- 4
Think about the back of the ticket. Can you offer any special discounts or deal in association with a company that may be sponsoring the event? You can also think about adding things like quick or fun facts about your event or venue.
- 5
Decide what color to make the ticket. White tickets are the cheapest to print, but brighter colors may make them easier to spot for ticket holders inside their wallets or if they place them somewhere in their home. If you choose to use a background image, make sure the font you've decided to use for the tickets will show up against it and your information will not be lost.
- 6
Print your tickets and make copies. To save paper, print as many as will fit on a piece of paper and use scissors or a paper cutter to cut them to size.
